IONTHS IN A MILITARY HOSPITAL.

Now, boys, the bayonet. Charge—charge! The Colorei, an he gave the order, firch his revoiver at a rebei ioficer who had dashed at him. The man fell mortally wounded, and our oid commander, pushing past him, rode into the midst of the surging rebel masses. We followed, and back went the enemy before our impetuous charge.
There was no standing against the rosh of our athletic men, who, shoulder to shoulder, pressed irresistibly forward. A few moments more and the rebels we've in flight.
The slicking sun shed lis last rays on our victorious colors, and lightened up the faces of the hundreds of dead and dying who were lying close together. Among the latter I cemmed myself. As we were charging a builet had struck me in the side, and I fell bathed in blood.

"shall is say with you, Captain?" asked one of the man who may me fail. I endeavored to wave bins on, but fainted from pain and loss os blood. When I recovered consciousness I was undergoing great agony from the probing of a rather inexperienced surges, who was determined he would extract the builet which was still in my side. This he accommished at last, after maxing mesurfer exeruciating pain. He then pronounced me out of danger; but said that my recovery result be elow, and that he would see that I was sent to one of the mritter y hospitals in Washington. The Chousel cume to see meeas, to my astenishment, as gentie and kind as a woman age, thanks to his care and solicitode, I was duly sout to astington and connictably shored away among a lot of over joung officers, all, like myself, seriously wounded.

For a time I soffered terribly the worker was very

"What can I do for him, doctor?" said the sweet cree-"What can I do for him, doctor?"

Had she placed it on my note I abould have said nothing, but I did think that my breast was a little lower down.

She endeavored to be triumphant, but I saw she was uneasy, and ere long she ran out of the room. A few moments after the sursex came io, and from the manner she proceeded to apply that positive in its proper place I saw she had roceived her orders.

Thus pacede away several days, Miss Alice coming to norse me requirity. My recovery was rapid, although she almost killed me twice by surrentitionely bringing me in delicacies I had expressed a wish for, contrary to the doctor's direction. Still, the benefit of her charming presence more than counterbalanced all her little blem ders, and I was fast reaching convalenceme when I received a terribbe blow, which occasioned a relayer. Miss alice informed me that in a few days she was going to New York on a visit, and that she would probably come no more to the hospital.

"I am so giad you are now able to get along without any further attention," said the young lady. "I have made you the object of my special care, and I think your recovery speaks volumes in favor of my nursing." She raticed on in this way for some time. I made no reply—could not. My disappointment was so great I could find no words to express it. "Lie seemingly paid no attention to my silence, but at last arose, sheek my hand and left the room. I left the blood restrict to my beside.

"Hy dove it is too bad." I heard the old fellow matter as I regained my senses. "Just as he axa getting on so famously, what can have observed the signation, this sudden bloom."

as I regained my sensee. "Just as he was getting on so intrinously. What can have chared this agitation, this sudden blow."

"Sector, she is lone, I shall see her no more." I be heve I shed tear as I thus exclaimed, I was so weak. "See who —see what."

"See and —see what."

"Mark Aless doctor.

"In doctor. I shall never git well now I shall die, I know I shall die you will if you agitate yourself in this man ner," said the doctor. I ome, I will see Miss Alor, and teil her that her potient a not out of danger yes.

He rost no time in so doing, and to my delight that alternous Wiss this came to see the accompanied by the doctor and her mother.

"How long, doctor, de you think he will need my care." Saided he aweet girl.

"Well, ma am, said the old man—and I wanted in keshim for its—"I should say for the term of his natural life and, to judge from his present appearance (I was so happy, and feit as well) he will live a hundred years.

Miss Alice blyshed to even a deeper hoe than on the occasion of final memorable position, and the old lady seemed soddenly to a waken to a seese of what was transpiring. She came towards me, and said, with great commisseration.

"th, manuma." protested Alice, who had blushed until her present his was a deep purple.

The old degree here hose scooned to assert that he was getting there of all "this nonsense." I poticed that he niew his ness vary unnecessarily, and that he tried to wipe his cross without being seen. He broke down, however, and next like a child, whom Aloce put her arm ground his neck and alread him, saying he was a "dear old hear."

"Come come, Miss., have no time to remain here." sad heagraity. "Louis of arms and legs to out of. Hall him, and rushed out without further notice.

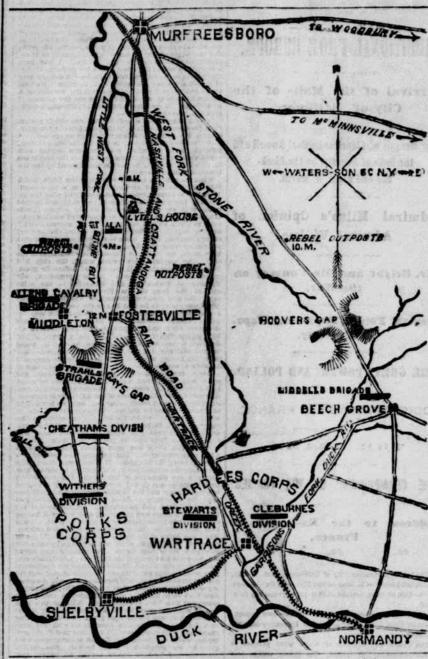

"You must be quiet how, and get well directly." God bless that ohl lady. I loved her then and there as a mother, which the I now have a right to bestow upon rice. In fact, I wall her grandma now, as there is an Alice No. 2 in the family.

The Boston Transcript and the Herald's War Correspon dents-Aspect of Affairs in this Department-Pailure to Profit by the Recent Campaign in the Atta-hapas Country-On Whom the Blame Should Rest-Ullmann's Corps d'Afrique-The Recent Lors in the Negro Regiments at Port Hudson-The Effed Upon the Negroes of this City-Provide in the Custom House-

The Boston Francerpt of the 10th Inst, is particularly severe upon the Herath's war correspondents, and charges them with having killed more men since the war bined. It is particularly severe upon the correspondent at New Orleans, and says.—"The last achievement of a HERALD correspondent was the destruction of three thou-sand Union soldiers at the assault upon Port Had-The real loss was one thousand; the HERALD'S cuit of the correspondent's own exertions on the that the above paragraph from the Transcript has been written late at night, when the writer was either very sleepy, or worse; and for this reason little should be said have only to say that the Hanato's New Orleans correspondent reported the Union loss in the assault upon Port Hudson of the 27th ult. at between two and three thou now asserts that the correct number of killed, wounded hundred, if not over that amount. The Transcript, a pa take the Hengio's account-giving proper Payme's division alone would materially change. There is no singuising the fact that matters look gloomy enough in this department. A month since everything presented the appearance of a short and brilliantly sucrestored to the Union, of not by the set of its citireme, by the force of the Union arms. Now everything resents a conflary appearance. The capture of Port Had tiges at all. The Attokapus country is recompled by the enemy in force, the Openions a failroad has been exist, and our force at Brackear City out off the wort bank of the Massissippi is fined with armal refiels, and every boot that now runs between that ity and Bet in Ronge his to be armed; the last regiment has arrived that can be drawn from any part of the pertuent, and the hospitals are flifed with sick and mounded. Such it in outline of affairs here. More could be said, but it would be contrained. The question may the majority of the regiments commonity the Barks ex-November last after seven or eight opens of their term green traces requiring much 's setting up: before they could be of use in the feed. The regiments that Gen. Benks found more on his arrival, three yours men had been subperied to nearly a year of exceedingly ardiness duty, and were much diministed in number by lighting and dimension. By the time Ceneral Banks was able to take the field the term of enlictment of at least two thirds of his army was last drawing to a coose, and in point of numbers he has about half the men numbers for the work to be perfactord. The actual erroughs of Port Hudson has never been properly observed. It is a Gibrabar, or either a Malakoff and yet General Hanks his neun expected to take it by safapit, without any previous homborished of some. to-tay more than ever inclined to think that George Backs will be compeled to full back on hairs Stone, if not upon New Orleans and this surrounding defender, accordingly. If we have not two thousand note and reprereserve toes enough theore reaching Bayon Sara to requi reinforcements after the investment of yearburg, they have be decreased the come some long to a few days and use them before he attempts any further account. We are not forthcoming, nor do we hear of any being on the way, although there has been time enough, with weeks to spare, to have forwarded here firty The importance of opening the Mississippi river and thus dividing the so-called confederacy, has become an old story. It should and could have been done had the government given the matter proper attention; but Hooker and the Army of the Potomac was the first conelderation, all other departments being left to take care of themselves. Ten thousand additional troops of the right kind, sent here six weeks ago, would ere this have given us the Mississippi river to Vicksburg; that they the North place the blame where it properly belongs, and up so fast that it will supply the place of white troops i this department. The experience of the negroes at Port meetres in a position to render their present idle life bereafter will be anything like as brick as has been heretofore, and the probabilities that conscription will have to be resorted to, department. Not desiring to bestow praise where which to many here has been exceedingly unpalatable they preferring that their shortcomings should remain unknown to the world. The active and brilliant cam-puign of General Banks in Western Louisiana has been fully and accurately set forth in the columns of the HEMALD, and all the credit given to the officers and men of the army they deserved. The importance of our people, and if the government has not seen fit to take ad so rich a country, is only for the reason of our not having the means to do so. If transportation could have been since destroyed, would have reached New Orienne. we were compelled to leave them behind, not having boats enough to transport troops and their subsistence. It has always struck me as being very strange that General Banks should have refused permission for merchants to visit the Atakapas country for the purpose of buying cotton and sugar, knowing as he must have mpossible it was for the army to bring away all that ing the opportunity to follow the army, but I do not hear of one permit having been granted to do so. If permits had been given these persons would have bought the produce and furnished the transportation themselves and the consequence would have been that the cotton since-consumed would have reached our Northern mills, and the povernous a "dog in a manger" determination, for it said claimly, " if I cannot, you shall not." However, it is now too late to find fault, let us profit by past experience, and if a new country is again opened by the advance of our army, let there be no restriction, whatever upon trade, for we will be the sufferers if there are. If General cotton found in Western Louisiana to this place, and had Uncle Sam, the expenses of the campaign would have been fully paid, besides benediting us in other ways. If we succeed in occupying the whole, or part of Missisposed of in a manner to benefit all, the people as well as I hinted in my last regarding discoveries made of dentit be made public in a little while. It is very exi-dent that Uncle Fam has suffered to a considerable ex-tent in the department of custome, and has been swindled and numbugged by men who have heretofere rapidly making for themselves most onerviable reputations, for they are all looked upon been it a suspicious manner. A committee of investigation kept busy, for not a day passen that we do not hear of some new man not rescality. It is rumored among these who are posted to such matters, that foctor Zacharie has pren appointed in his stend by the authorities in Wash what jurpose he wer sent here; but if he has been ret torning to New York and resoming the practice of his profession. The immonen number of government agents to thus vicinity, all professing to act in different capacities, is automating what they are wanted for we can only conjecture, for there connot be employment enough for one half. They do not work for nothing, I suppose, and if they are all mode of life, is will take more bales of notion than we have yet control to pay them. The protect curs now to service will have more interesting cases eroughs before it than any other tribunal in New Orleans, and made before it that will compromise more than see at I think that what I have said can be read with profit as even in his present distracted condition.
